ADAPTIVE TECHNOLOGY

The drills are adaptive resulting in greater retention and effective use of learning time. They adjust to an individual's speed and level. What one person still finds difficult is automatically repeated more often and material they've already mastered is repeated less frequently.

IDEAS FOR USE

FORMATIVE OR SUMMATIVE ASSESSMENT

Assign a drill before beginning a unit to find out what students already know and what topics will need more instruction.

Assign a drill after a unit to check for understanding.

HOMEWORK

Working on fractions? Assign the equivalent fractions drill for extra practice.

Studying the human body? Assign the circulatory system drill as an introduction to that system.

INTERVENTION

Create a class to represent a small group, or assign content to individuals within a class for extra practice.

The feedback in a drill helps provide extra instruction and correct misconceptions on the spot!
